DEPUTY SHERIFF SLAIN MONDAY MORNING

Charles Murchison Mortally Wounded While in Quest of Owner of Still—Died Several Hours Later

Deputy Sheriff Chas. A. Murchison is dead and Ruby Jimerson is in the McCracken County Jail awaiting trial for his murder, as a result of the raiding of Jimerson's alleged moonshine still here.

The tragedy, which has shocked the whole of Fulton County as nothing which has occurred in recent years, was enacted on the farm rented by Jim McNeill from the Drewerys, which is near Stahl's Crossing, about four miles east of town, where it is alleged that Jimerson was operating a moonshine still, at about five o'clock Monday morning.

Sheriff West and Joe Walls and Deputy Murchison and Henry had searched the place the day before and located the still, or furnace, at about 5 o'clock that evening. After watching until midnight, Sheriff West and Mr. Walls returned to town and left the deputies there to watch for the owner to appear. At about five o'clock Monday morning they saw Jimerson approach. Mr. Murchison raised up to halt Jimerson when they were about ten feet apart and the latter fired his shot gun loaded with buck shot at him, the shot taking effect in his left shoulder. Almost the entire shoulder bone was blown away, and the shot razing downward, several shot, gun wadding and shattered bone were carried into the lung. Mr. Murchison, it is said, made an attempt to fire when he saw Jimerson level his gun at him, but he had neglected to pull the hammer back. Deputy Henry ran to his assistance as soon as he heard the shot, and picked up the shot gun and fired at the fleeing Jimerson, but was unable to stop him. It is said that a few of the shot struck Jimerson in the back.

Sheriff West, Chief of Police Sid

Hambly, Ben Nering, Joe Wall and several other citizens left as soon as news of the tragedy reached Hickman, but Jimerson had made his escape. The injured man was brought to Hickman immediately where he was given every attention known to medical science by Dr. H. E. Prather and Dr. J. C. Murchison. Owing to the nature of the wound he suffered gradually weakening throughout the day, and after a heroic fight, he passed away at 11:45 Monday night.

After Jimerson's escape a reward of $300 was offered by Hickman citizens and was duplicated by Governor Morrow. Small posses were organized to search for him. Receiving information as to his whereabouts from someone, whose name has not been revealed to the public, he was finally located late Tuesday night by Sheriff West, Sam Hamby, Golder Johnson, Joe Walls, John Wright and Perkins Hicks. He was captured near the place where the Hickman road to Fulton joins in the main State line road, near the corner in the road which is below Berry Threlkeld's place. It is rumored that some one was to meet Jimerson at this lonely part of the road at eleven o'clock and take him away. The officers got out of the car and Perkins Hicks gave the signal which was to notify him that his car was waiting. In about five minutes he came out of a field north of the road and the officers commanded him to halt, whereupon he opened fire and shot twice. Both shots went wild and three shots from the posse brought him down. One shot took effect in his hip, another in his leg, tearing it considerably from the knee down, and a third entered his foot.

He was brought to town as quietly as possible where his wounds were dressed, and then was taken to Paducah and placed in the McCracken County Jail for safe keeping.

Mr. Murchison was one of the most popular men of Fulton County. He held the office of jailer for eight years, and last year made the race for sheriff. He was appointed deputy by Sheriff West at the beginning of his term, and his entire experience as a public official was devoted to a conscientious effort to serve the people faithfully.

He was born in Hickman County, March 18, 1877, and had spent his entire life in that and Fulton Counties, being known through both counties well. He was a member of both the Masonic and Elks fraternities.

Besides his wife, he is survived by two sons, Billy and Elmer, and a brother and three sisters.

Funeral services were held yesterday afternoon at three o'clock at the First Methodist Church, all the pastors of the city assisting in the service. One of the largest crowds ever attending a funeral in this city was present to do honor to the remains of the man who has given his life to uphold the law of the land. Burial was had at the City Cemetery in charge of the Cuyler Masonic Lodge.

TO CUT PASSENGER RATES?

Lower passenger rates on the railroads will follow the recent ten percent cut in freight rates, government officials say. Lower fares are essential to draw revenues from the traveling public, members of the commerce commission declare. Persons are not doing much traveling under the present high rate. Figures show that passenger traffic on all railroads in the United States is seven million passenger miles below normal.

P. T. A. MEETING.

The Parent-Teachers Association will have a call meeting at four o'clock Saturday afternoon at the courthouse. The members are all urged to be present.

Miss Frankie Reid returned Saturday from a ten days' visit in Hawesville and Louisville.

Mrs. J. D. Price and Mrs. W. J. Spradlin visited relatives near Union City Sunday.

AMERICAN LEGION MEMORIAL AT CAVE

Dedication ceremonies of the American Legion Memorial at Mammoth Cave will feature the fourth annual convention of the American Legion of Kentucky, to be held at Glasgow, Aug. 28, 29 and 30.

On the third day the entire program will be held at Mammoth Cave. In the "Rotunda," one of the Cave's most majestic domes, and the junction point for the several branches of the historical old cavern, there will be dedicated a memorial, the base of which will be a crypt for the names of the heroes and immortal dead of the World War from the entire nation.

This monument will be erected by the members of Barren County Post No. 28 of Glasgow. Mammoth Cave, which has been in existence before man himself, and will endure until the remotest point of time, will be a most suitable place to perpetuate the indelible memory of the heroes of the world war. Little need be said of the history of Mammoth Cave, and to try to describe it in a short sketch would be a task little short of the impossible.

The cave was known and used as a designation point for surveys as early as the year 1797. From the part of the cave near the entrance, sulphur was mined for the manufacture of gunpowder during the war of 1812. It is near the remains of these sulphur works which are yet to be seen at the cave that the Legion monument will be erected.

Nothing could be more fitting than that we should complete a triangle of hallowed places in Kentucky, and no more appropriate spot could be chosen for such a national monument than this gigantic hole which winds for miles and miles under the hills and valleys of God's garden spot—Kentucky.

About fifty miles to the northwest of Abraham Lincoln, now dedicated into national park, to stand as a perpetual honor to the poor farm boy who rose above the pressure of circumstances and became the nation's helmsman during its most tempestuous times.

To the southwest of the cave, almost equidistant, on the site of the farm where the first and only president of the Southern Confederacy first saw the light of day, remnants of the gray hosts are erecting a shaft to their honored leader, Jefferson Davis.

The erection of this American Legion monument will complete the triangle. The base being represented by the birthplaces of America's Civil War presidents, the apex, the resting place of the names of the fallen warriors of our present day democracy.

Storms, fires, vandals and war may destroy or uproot cemeteries and monuments on the surface of the earth, but nothing less than a violent eruption of the earth itself will ever efface this unusual subterranean cenotaph.

Invitations have been extended to President Harding, General Pershing, Governor Morrow, Lieutenant-Governor Ballard, all of Kentucky's representatives in Congress, national officers of the American Legion and the various state headquarters of the American Legion.

Permission has been granted for the erection of this monument by the Mammoth Cave management, and for the first time in the history of the cave the gates will be thrown open for the delegates and visitors to the ceremony.

Norma Dale, the 2-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Irby Brner, died at their home in West Hickman on Monday night, exactly four years after the death of their first child. Death resulted from flux, from which the baby had been suffering for several days. Interment was had on Tuesday afternoon at the City cemetery. This was their only child.

Clifford Johnson, the 18-year-old son of J. H. Johnson, was operated on in the Dyersburg hospital last Thursday for appendicitis. He is reported as doing splendidly. His case was the most serious and not an acute attack, having the operation performed before an attack occurred. He had been suffering from chronic appendicitis for some time.

Earl Ezell and wife returned the latter part of last week from Bowling Green, where he has been attending business college. Mr. Ezell left after a day's visit for Louisiana, where he has accepted a position as teacher in the business department of a school. Mrs. Ezell will remain here for a month's visit before joining him.

Misses Mary Briggs, Mary B. Parham, Louise McMullen and Mary Creed went to St. Louis Saturday on the excursion and were guests of Mrs. Leighton Shelby, all returning Monday but Miss Creed, who will spend several weeks with her sister.

Gaylen Crawford, Ben Harrison, Harley Ellis, Henry Fethe, Edmond Shelby and Charles Wilson were among those who took advantage of the excursion to St. Louis last Saturday, returning Sunday night.

W. F. Blakemore has returned from a pleasant visit with his daughter, Mrs. Wes Adams, at Nashville, and his brother in Huntsville, Ala.

Mrs. Albert Williams, Miss Willie B. Johnson and Fannie Harrington motored to Dyersburg Sunday in the latter's car and spent the day with Mr. and Mrs. John Dotson.

C. M. Walts was in Louisville Saturday.

OPERATED ON ROOSTER

A case unparalleled and unheard of here occurred the past week when, to relieve the intense suffering and save the life of a very fine White Rock rooster worth $25, Mrs. J. W. Mayes, assisted by Mr. Mayes, made an incision and a half incision in the rooster's crown and removed therefrom 857 soy beans. Mrs. Mayes, who is president of the Fulton County Poultry Association and raises very fine chickens, discovered this rooster sick, and the next day he was still worse, and she noticed his crown was swollen to enormous size. Picking the food up she found the crown stretched to such an extent and so thin that they could see the soybeans through the skin. Mrs. Mayes had read in her poultry literature where similar operations had been made, and she and her husband, with a knife, made an incision and a half incision in the rooster's crown. The beans, from the moisture and warmth of the body, had swollen to such an extent that they had to dig them out with a knife, and Mr. Mayes, as he removed them, laid out in lots of 100, and to his utter amazement found the rooster had swallowed 857 soybeans. These beans are about the size of a small pea and are used for hog feed. He had a lot of them on the back porch and this was where the rooster had found and eaten them. After the operation they took five stitches in the crown with silk thread and then five more in the outer skin, using iodine as a disinfectant. The rooster made no attempt to struggle during the operation, seeming so grateful for the relief, the only noticeable effect on him being a twitching of the legs when they applied the iodine. The rooster was then put in a coop where he could be fed soft food and cared for, immediately began to improve and is now out among the other fowls, apparently none the worse for his very unusual experience.

KIMBRO-WHITE

On last Saturday afternoon Miss Ruth White and Paul Kimbro of this city were quietly married at the parsonage by the Rev. W. A. Banks, pastor of the West Hickman Methodist Church. The bride is the younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tom White of Cuyler, but for the past two years she has held a position during the millinery season with the firm of Smith & Amberg and has many friends in this city. The groom is the only son of Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Kimbro, and is well and favorably known to Hickman people. Congratulations.

MOTHER OF SEVENTEEN DIES

Mrs. Amelia Craver, 73, died at her home in Union City last week, after a long illness. Mrs. Craver was the mother of seventeen children, twelve of whom survive her. She is also survived by one sister and three brothers. Mrs. Craver was a lifelong member of the Baptist church.

TUESDAY, JUNE 20, CHAUTAUQUA BEGINS

Parent-Teachers' Association in Charge of Sale of Tickets.

The Redpath Chautauqua opens its engagement in Hickman next Tuesday, June 20th, the New England Mule Quartet being the first number on the excellent program which will be given here this year. Five days as usual will be devoted to the chautauqua. Among the most interesting numbers on the program are the lecture of Granville Jones who takes as his subject "The Philosophy of the 1911 Billy" on the third night and the performance of the Solis Marlboro Band on the last night of the program. Many other interesting and helpful numbers are on this year's program, but Frank H. Nelson, advance man, who is now in the city in the interest of the chautauqua, says that these are perhaps the high spots on the program. Especial stress is also laid on the children's hour which is held at ten o'clock each morning. An excellent trained children's worker is in charge of this work, and according to Mr. Nelson, this feature on the program is even better than ever. A new manager, W. W. Davis, and the oldest in point of service connected with the chautauqua, will be in charge of the chautauqua this year. The afternoon programs will begin at four o'clock with the evening performance beginning at eight.

The sale of the tickets to the chautauqua this year has been placed in the hands of the Parent-Teachers Association. This will eliminate the war tax of 25 cents which heretofore has been charged, so that the season tickets this year will be sold for only $2.50. It is especially urged that those who intend to buy tickets this year buy them early, as it will eliminate the trouble and worry of going back time and again to the same people trying to sell the tickets. With the good program arranged and the lowered price of the tickets there should be no trouble in selling the required number of season tickets this year.

JOHNSON-FULLER

Mrs. Van Fuller and J. H. Johnson, both well known people of West Hickman, were quietly married on Tuesday evening of last week at the court house, Rev. E. L. Miley officiating. The bride has for years been a member of the faculty of the West Hickman school and is well known to Hickman people. She is the eldest daughter of Mrs. M. E. Henry and was born and reared in this county. The groom is a lumber inspector for the Muegel Company and a man of fine standing in the city.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Powell and Theron Powell of Walnut Log spent Sunday night with friends in Hickman.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—Harriet Field, twenty-eight years old and beautiful, is the social secretary of the fashionable Mrs. Isabelle Carter, at "Crowlands," Richard Carter's home, and governess of fifteen-year-old Nina Carter. Ward, twenty-four years old and handsome, flatters himself in love with his mother's attractive secretary. Mrs. Carter's latest "affair" is with young Anthony Pope, and the youth is taking it very seriously.

CHAPTER II—Presiding over the tea-party this summer afternoon, Harriet is profoundly disturbed by the arrival of a visitor. Harold Blondin, next day, at a tea party in the city, Blondin makes himself agreeable to Nina, and leaves a deep impression on the unsophisticated girl.

CHAPTER III—Harriet's agitation over the entrance of Blondin is explained by the fact that he had been a disturbing element in her life ten years before, and she fears him. The man is an avowed adventurer, living on the wild side of the law. He is the son of a wealthy family, but he is a thoroughly dishonest man, and he is a thoroughly dishonest man.

CHAPTER IV—Harriet visits her married sister, Linda Davenport, with whom she had had some during her unfortunate acquaintance with Blondin, and tells her of her reappearance. The two women, realizing the disastrous nature of the man, view the future with apprehension.

CHAPTER V—Knowing the tender feeling she has for Linda, Harriet is tempted to marry him for the position and wealth he can give her, though realizing she does not love him. Blondin has himself with Madame Carter, Richard's mother, and she is wholeheartedly in favor of his marriage with Nina. Ward urges Harriet to marry him at once. She procrastinates.

CHAPTER VI—Annoyed at his wife's too open flirtation with young Anthony Pope, Richard Carter markedly shows his resentment. He is, however, secretly her youthful lover's attachment, elopes with him on his yacht, and pursues it. The news of the sensational affair, exaggerated, of course, by gossip, is kept as much as possible from being public property.

CHAPTER VII—Ward Carter again urges Harriet to marry him, but she cannot bring herself to an alliance with him merely for the sake of money. The fact of Mrs. Carter's elopement becomes public. Harriet's capable marriage here is more than needed at "Crowlands," and despite the complications she foresees as inevitable she decides to remain.

CHAPTER VIII—Blondin puts pressure on Harriet to forward his marriage with Nina, but she makes up her mind to defy him. Richard Carter questions her knowledge of Blondin's intentions, and she counsels active opposition to the match. The family, with Harriet, move to a summer establishment on Long Island.

CHAPTER IX—In the new home Harriet, with Madame Carter and Nina, settles down in a frank talk. It is Frank talk with Nina Harriet endeavors to show her Blondin's unworthiness, but it has little effect on the infatuated girl. On Richard Carter's insistence, Harriet is installed as mistress of the household, but finding her position untenable, declares her intention of leaving Richard makes an offer of marriage, as a way out of the situation, but Harriet, considering such a thing impossible, declines. Mrs. Carter, though disapproved is still alive, refuses, and leaves the house. To her old-fashioned, she feels that Richard Carter has been granted a divorce from his marriage, and that he is free to marry her.

CHAPTER X—At her sister's home Harriet helps to bring her small nephew, safely through an attack of diphtheria. Linda steadily approves Harriet's conduct on the question of marriage with a divorced man. David Davenport, Linda's brother-in-law, warmly presses his suit, and Harriet has about made up her mind to accept him when Richard Carter appears with the announcement that Isabelle is dead and no obstacle to his marriage with Harriet remains. The girl yields, and the marriage is quietly solemnized. Harriet offers to tell Richard the circumstances of her entanglement with Blondin, but he refuses to listen.

CHAPTER XI—The news of their mother's death is a shock to Ward and Nina. The three take a trip to Bermuda, and on their return Richard Carter realizes that he is deeply in love with Harriet, though their marriage has simply been one of convenience.

CHAPTER XII—Formal announcement of the wedding is made, and Madame Carter somewhat grudgingly welcomes her new daughter-in-law. Harriet's close friends, however, many of them prominent in society circles, willingly accord her a place, and extend sincere congratulations to Richard.

CHAPTER XIII—Counseled by Harriet, Richard Carter urges Nina to abandon the idea of marriage with Blondin, but the girl is obstinate. Summoning Blondin, Carter makes his opposition plain. Blondin appeals to Harriet for support, and on her refusal makes the assertion that he and Harriet had been married two years ago. Harriet partially admits the truth of the statement.

CHAPTER XIV—Next day Harriet reveals to her husband the facts of her entanglement with Blondin. Nine years before, she had gone through an absurd, entirely illegal form of marriage with him, and had immediately thereafter left him. She had imagined, however, that she was in a way compromised, and that had given Blondin his bold story. Richard assures her of his understanding and sympathy, and their reconciliation is complete.

CHAPTER XV—The summer Sunday ran its usual course. Ward and his sister went to luncheon at the club; Madame Carter

"I think I have Blondin's number," Richard said, with more force than eloquence. Then, with a little laugh that was partly amused and partly embarrassed, he let her go.

He watched the young, slender figure and the shining, bare head until they disappeared among the great trees about the house.

CHAPTER XV.

The summer Sunday ran its usual course. Ward and his sister went to luncheon at the club; Madame Carter drove majestically to a little house in the pretty, vine-covered village of Harriet, at last able to relax in content.

and body, slept hour after glorious hour. Richard, returning from golf for a late luncheon, asked for Mrs. Carter. She was still asleep, Blondin assured him, and received orders not to disturb her. But when Mr. Blondin called, Richard told the truth, he was to be shown to the terrace at once.

"I had your message," Royal said, as an opening.

"You've not seen Nina today?" Nina's father asked.

"I broke an engagement with her at the club," the other man assured him. "We will probably meet at the Belmans', at dinner this evening."

"Ah, it was about that I wished to speak," Richard paused, and Blondin watched him with polite interest. "You have held your knowledge of Mrs. Carter as a sort of weapon for some months," Richard said, presently. "To use it when you saw fit. I have always been in my wife's confidence."

He paused, but for no reason that Blondin could divine. As a matter of fact, it gave Richard a sudden and unexpected pleasure to speak of her so, to realize that he really might give the most wonderful thing in the world to this beautiful and spirited woman.

"And I have also talked with Nina this morning," he went on. "I regret to say that her intentions have not altered."

"A royal little heart!" Blondin said, gravely and contentedly. "I knew I could depend upon her!"

"I said I wanted to see you on business, Mr. Blondin," Richard continued, trying to keep impudence and contempt out of his voice, "and we'll keep to business. I don't know what your circumstances are, of course."

He hesitated, and Blondin looked at him with a faint interest.

"I live simply," he said. "Nina's money will be all her own."

"Nina will have no money, not one five-cent piece, for exactly three years!" Richard said.

Blondin shrugged.

"She is quite willing to try it!" he reminded her father.

"I know she is! But how about you?" Richard asked. "You are not a boy, you have some idea of what marriage means. For three years you must take care of her, dress her, amuse her, satisfy her that she has not made a mistake. Then she does come into her money—yes. But three years is a long time in which to keep her certain that the wisest thing she can do is turn it over to you."

He paused; Blondin smoked hopelessly.

"The marriage must be a notorious one, in any case," Richard pursued. "For I intend to make my mind too clear ever to permit of a retraction. I shall forbid it—let the world know that I forbid it. I shall forbid my daughter the house, and her wedding gift will be simply the clothes she happens to have. From Tuesday—her eighteenth birthday—she will turn to you for her actual pocket money, for her theater tickets and club fares."

"I understand that perfectly," Royal said, solemnly. But underneath, while not moved from his intention, he felt his customary assurance shaken.

"She is extravagant, naturally," her father said. "She will want new gowns, want to display her new hair, want to be a little. Those bills will come to you, Mr. Blondin. All the world will know as well as you do that I have washed my hands of the whole affair."

Blondin had no money, and lived with an extravagance that kept him perpetually worried for money. His credit would receive an immediate assistance from a marriage with Richard Carter's daughter, to be sure, but to sustain a credit for three years upon that shadowy footing would be extremely trying.

He liked Nina; despite his contempt for the girl, there was a certain pitying affection for her stubborn loyalty and simplicity. But he knew exactly what hideous scenes must follow upon his marriage with her. What could he do with her, even suppose him to have borrowed money enough to make their honeymoon a success? He imagined her dawdling about his studio, imagined his social standing as necessarily affected, imagined Mr. and Mrs. Royal Blondin attempting to reach an agreement as to which invitations would be

I. RADIO AN OUTGROWTH OF THE WAR

We usually think of the great war as a disaster and as having done an incalculable amount of harm to the world and its people, but it is very doubtful if the war did as much harm as good. Within the few years it lasted it resulted in immense benefits to mankind in the tremendous discoveries, improvements and advancement of medicine, surgery, chemistry, aerodynamics, mechanics, engineering, metallurgy and wireless communication, and while the toll of life, the destruction of property, the devastation of lands, the loss of art and the bankruptcy of nations are all temporary and will soon be replaced and forgotten, the scientific progress and discoveries, which were a direct result of the war, will endure forever and will continue to benefit mankind.

Of all the arts and sciences which received an unprecedented impetus by the war, none is of greater interest or has a more far-reaching effect to the average person than radio telephony. Before the war wireless telephony was well established, universally used and a fairly exact and well-understood science; but wireless telephony was scarcely more than a dream, a visionary, uncertain thing; complicated, little understood and literally in its infancy.

But today, so incredibly rapid have been the strides made in the development of this science, that wireless telephony is an every-day affair; a simple, easily understood thing—far simpler than telegraphy—and in constant use, not only commercially, but by countless thousands of amateurs. In a way, however, the war merely launched practical radio telephony on its career and far greater progress has been made in commercializing, simplifying and cheapening it within the past four months (October to February, 1921-22)—than within the previous six years. Indeed, so rapid has been its advancement, that it seems to have come upon us almost overnight, and within a few short weeks it has leaped from an obscure, scientific curiosity to an almost universally used means of entertainment and profit.

Today thousands of mere boys are using wireless telephones—many of the instruments made by the boys themselves—and in department stores, electrical supply stores and elsewhere sets for receiving may be purchased for a few dollars. From various stations, music, crop reports, market reports, weather reports, speeches, songs, operas, plays, stories, official time, racing and baseball returns; shipping news and countless other interesting matters are sent broadcast through the air, free to anyone who possesses a wireless telephone receiving set. Thus, the farmer, miles from the nearest town, the sailor at sea, passengers on ships, guests in hotels, crowds about bulletin boards and people in their own homes can listen to the voices of famous men, the music of bands and orchestras, the singing of famous operatic stars, the dialogues of plays and countless other things, from far-distant points and as clearly and plainly as though no space intervened.

Truly, radio telephony is the great modern miracle: a dream more fantastic and fairy-like than the Arabian Nights; a more marvelous actuality than the fabulous lamp of Aladdin or the flying carpet, and best of all, it is within the reach of everyone, while the "music in the air" is free to all who care to listen in.

It is certainly a strange, almost incredible, thing to think that the air about us, even within our dwellings, is constantly filled with sounds, voices, music, messages and songs which are as audible as they are invisible, but which may be caught and delivered to our ears by means of a few wires and batteries and a few appliances so simple that even a child may use them.

And the limit is far from being reached. Within a few years or even months, the range of wireless telephony will be increased by hundreds or even thousands of miles, antennae or aerials will be entirely done away with and the instruments for sending and receiving will be so improved, simplified and reduced that one may carry them in one's pocket, for while radio telephony has already become highly perfected, widely used and absolutely practical, yet it is still hardly out of its infancy and no man may prophesy what its future may be.

An empire that furnishes to Kentucky democracy the votes that meet the rising tide of republicanism coming from the mountains and coal fields of the Eastern part of the state. A citizenship that backs its party from conviction and without hope of personal reward, against the bossism and machine control of Jefferson county republicanism. A people that stands for political and individual morality; that believes the machinery of state government should be used to advance the welfare of the men and women and children of Kentucky rather than selfish interests and financial advancement of party "bosses" and soulless business interests. Interests that stand ready to subvert the economic and social advancement of the people of Kentucky to their own private and selfish ends.

Party lines have become too closely drawn in Kentucky—and it may be for the last interests of Kentucky party that they are closely drawn—for either party to overlook for one second its obligation to the voters of the state. State officials and the representatives elected by the people must give close heed to the needs of the people of Kentucky. They must give aid, where aid can be given, to the neglected, educational interests of the state. They must give us a system of roads which will place Kentucky on a firm, competitive basis with the states that surround us. They must give careful consideration to our tax laws, to the end that taxation may be equitably and fairly distributed throughout the entire fabric of Kentucky's economic life. All the needs of Kentucky must be carefully considered if the party in power can expect to remain in power.

Upon the shoulders of those who have accepted leadership in directing the destinies of the Democratic party in Kentucky rests a serious obligation. If they are to serve the advancement of the Democratic party they must first serve the needs of the people of the state fairly and economically. They must see to it that their support is given only to men of unquestioned integrity and ability. Men who will command the respect and confidence of the rank and file of democracy and who will administer the affairs of the state with judgment and with consideration for the welfare and rights of the people at large.

Kentucky needs a business administration, free from petty politics and private plunder. If the Democratic party can offer the voters of the state candidates whose private lives and public service justify such expectation, the party can look forward confidently to success at the polls a year from next November. If candidates of questionable character and association are offered, it will only serve to continue the conditions under which Kentucky has suffered in the past.

We say to the leaders of the Democratic party: Give the Purchase a chance to show its real Democratic strength.

The News-Democrat calls upon the good men and women of this district, the responsible Democratic majority—and a majority is always responsible—of the Purchase counties, to join with us in demanding from the leaders of our party, in the state at large, serious consideration of the character of the candidates who shall carry the standard of democracy in the 1922 election.

TEACHERS' SALARY SCHEDULE

Of Fulton County, Kentucky, for the School Year, 1922-23

The salary schedule must be made by the County Board of Education and submitted in duplicate to the State Board of Education for approval by the State Board before teachers' contracts are made; and an approved schedule must be in effect before any payments are made to teachers.

No teacher can be legally employed who does not hold at the time of his employment a proper legal certificate which will not expire during the term for which he is employed.

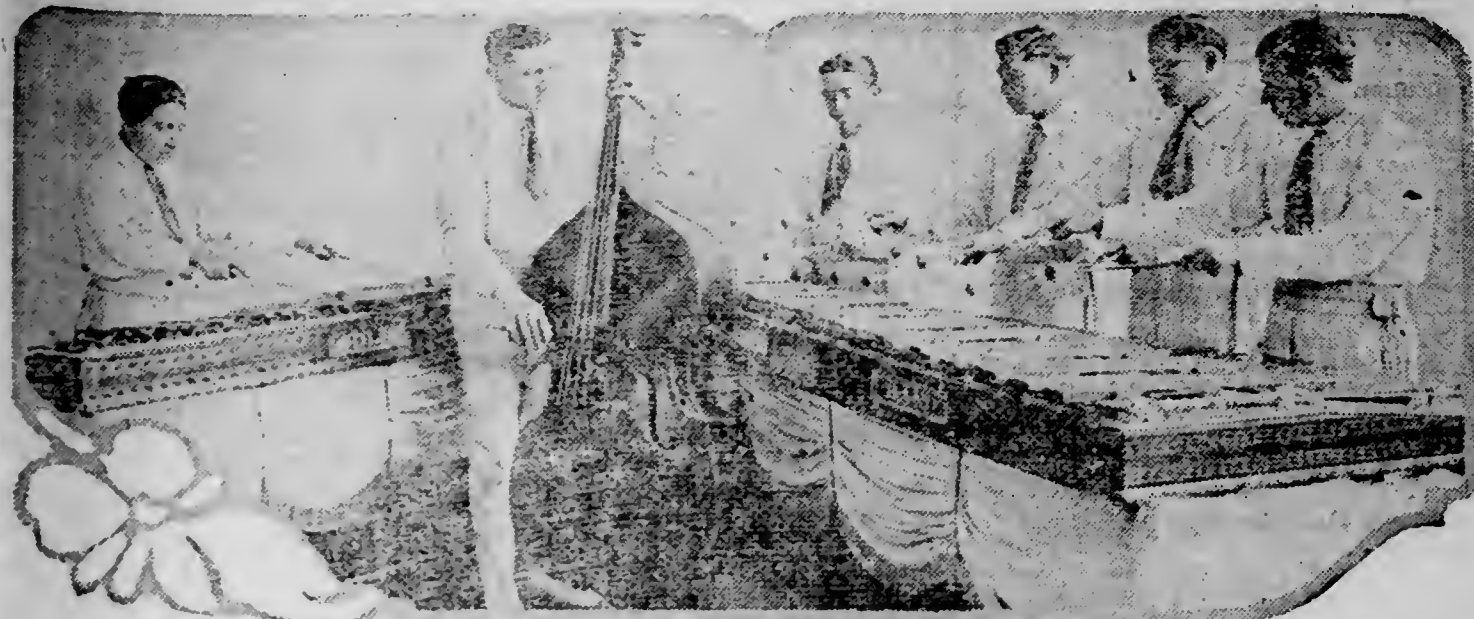

The first 25¢ of the county school levy must be devoted exclusively to supplementing teachers' salaries, or as much of it as is needed to meet the salary schedule and the minimum salary law. In those counties where the 25¢ levy when added to the state per capita is not sufficient to meet the minimum salary law, the county board may pay a lower salary than the legal minimum. Salaries in no county ought to be uniform, but the salary paid should have a direct relation to the teachers' preparation and experience.

This salary schedule must be kept posted in the county superintendent's office and must be published in the local paper. It must be made the basis and a part of the teacher's contract.

The salaries of all teachers employed by the county board of education, whether teaching in the elementary schools of the county or in county high schools, will be based on the following:

1. Preparation.
1a Graduates of the 8th grade—$ 60
1b Graduates of the 8th grade plus 1 year of high school—63

GETS BACK PENSION; PUTS MONEY INTO CIRCULATION

Frank Megerle, who, three months ago, came into possession of $3,900 pension money, after being almost without funds for several years, seemingly is having all the pleasures of the near-rich in his declining years, says the Clover-port News. Megerle's latest purchase is a "silver" and a chauffeur to drive him around town. Since coming into possession of his money Megerle has all the comforts of some place to eat and sleep, he dresses well and is never without a cigar. He gives liberally to any charitable or local enterprise for which contributions are sought and, in fact, is today one of the outstanding characters of the town.

DOULTRY

GOOD FENCES ARE REQUIRED

Fowls Running at Large Destroy Gardens and Flower Beds—Confine Them in Yards.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
Confine the hens and ducks; otherwise they will stray into neighbors' yards and gardens, where they may cause damage and are almost sure to be killed. The yard should be enclosed by a board or wire fence. While fences are preferable, as it is almost impossible to keep the hens from straying, it is necessary to cover the top of the yard with wire also. A board fence is not used at the top of a yard, as it gives the hens a place to stand and tends to break down the fence.

A 5-foot fence is high enough for most purposes, but if the hens show a tendency to fly over such a fence the top of the fence should be covered with wire. The fence should be made of 1 by 2 inch lumber, 6 feet long and 3 feet wide, with an additional piece across the center to support the wire when the hens stand on it. It will be found desirable for a small yard. A part of the yard as large as this frame is spaced up and down, the frame placed over it, and the material allowed to grow. As soon as the green sprouts reach the wire the hens will begin to pick them off, but since they cannot eat them down to the roots the sprouts will continue to grow and supply green material. This frame can be moved from place to place in the yard, and in this way different parts cultivated.

The yard should be stirred or spaded up frequently, if not in soil, in order to keep it in the best condition. This will not only tend to keep down any odors which might arise, but also allow the droppings to be absorbed into the soil more readily, and, therefore, keep the yard in better condition for the hens.

Although it is necessary to keep the hens confined to their yard most of the time, it is sometimes possible to let them out where they may range upon the lawn for an hour or so in the evening when some one can be at hand to watch them or at certain seasons of the year to allow them to run in the garden plot. This will be enjoyed greatly by the hens and will be very beneficial to them.

Cataract Deafness Cannot Be Cured by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure catarrh of the ear and that is by a constitutional remedy.

HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE acts through the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system. Catarrh of the ear is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing may be destroyed forever. Many cases of deafness are caused by catarrh, which is an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

IS MARVEL OF MECHANISM

"Great Balance" of the Bank of England Capable of Registering Weight of Thistle-down.

The "great balance" stands in the bullion room of the Bank of England. It is a machine that was constructed primarily for testing light gold coins. Standing approximately seven feet high and weighing nearly two tons, this wonderful piece of mechanism can weigh a piece of thistle-down or a 400-pound gold bar with equal accuracy. Before it can be used it must always be carefully dusted, for otherwise the dust that has settled upon it, even in the course of a few minutes, would cause it to register inaccurately. So responsive is the machinery that a postage stamp placed on one of the two weighing portions moves the index six inches.

When the new English currency notes were issued the great balance was kept busy virtually day and night weighing the gold coinage that was called in and replaced by notes. It has now been found that the total loss of gold, owing to the absorption of the coins as they passed from hand to hand in the course of circulation, amounts to nearly $5,000,000.

That, however, is not quite so alarming as it sounds, for the loss is spread over a period of 25 years. Twenty-five years is reckoned in England to be the legal "life" of a sovereign in its full face weight.—New York Herald.

DIDN'T CARRY OUT THE JOKE

Young Man Probably Was Wise in Not Impersonating the "Family Ghost" for Butler's Benefit.

Among the guests at an English country house one Christmas was a young gentleman who claimed to be able to "read character at a glance." "Now, there's your father," he remarked to his host, "I've seen little of the man, but I would undertake by merely playing the family ghost, to frighten him into a fit."

"I don't think you would," laughed the host. "Anyhow, you leave my consent to try."

The young fellow declared his intention to do so, but as he didn't wish to overdo the thing, he determined to drop a word of warning to the father. "I say, Briggs," he whispered to that individual on meeting him in the corridor, "you haven't seen the family ghost, have you? I'm told that he invariably walks on Christmas eve, y'know?"

"Thank you for the hint, sir," calmly replied the father. "One that should be worth a shilling, sir, and—here he dived his hand into a bag pocket, and produced a white-headed raven—'there's one for the ghost if you should see him this eve!'"

The young gentleman decided that, after all, he couldn't carry the joke any further.

Magna Charta Draws Visitors.

After 700 years, Magna Charta remains the most popular British manuscript. Last year 14,000 persons went to the British museum to see it. Americans invariably ask to view the famous charter which insures Englishmen their rights, according to the museum custodians, but other foreigners take more interest in the papal bull, which is displayed next to it.

Heavy green blinds are kept over the precious parchment to exclude the full light rays and thus prevent deterioration, but are lifted to show the charter to admiring pilgrims.

Most persons are disappointed at not seeing King John's signature, according to an official at the museum, but they seem satisfied when they read the script that it was "given by our hand in the meadow which is called Runnymede, between Windsor and Staines, on the 15th day of June in the 17th reign of our reign. (1215)."

Women in China.

In the New International Encyclopedia, edition of 1922, the following statement was made: "In China proper not more than 6 per cent of the men and 2 per cent of the women can read an ordinary book." But a great advancement in the education of women has been made during the last twenty years. The Encyclopedia Americana, published in 1920, says: "Until very recently, female education, so far as it existed, was mainly a private or a family affair. Of late years, largely through missionary influence and example, the education of women has made surprising progress, and the tendency is now strongly toward more equality in intellectual training without regard to sex."

Gas Has 2,000 Industrial Uses.

Artificial gas is lighting the homes of thousands of housewives in the homes of 10,000,000 Americans, and is the "silent partner" of industry, where it has upward of 2,000 uses. The vast sum of $1,000,000,000 has been invested in plants and equipment. Approximately 1,000 communities now have gas, the mains being equal in mileage to nearly three times the circumference of the earth. It is used in more than 7,000,000 cooking stoves and appliances, 1,500,000 water heaters and 1,000,000 gas heaters and has become so necessary to industry that thousands of manufacturing plants would be forced to close if the gas companies were unable to continue to supply them with gas.

EVEN CAREFUL CALOMEL USERS ARE SALIVATED

Next Dose of Treacherous Drug May Start Misery for You

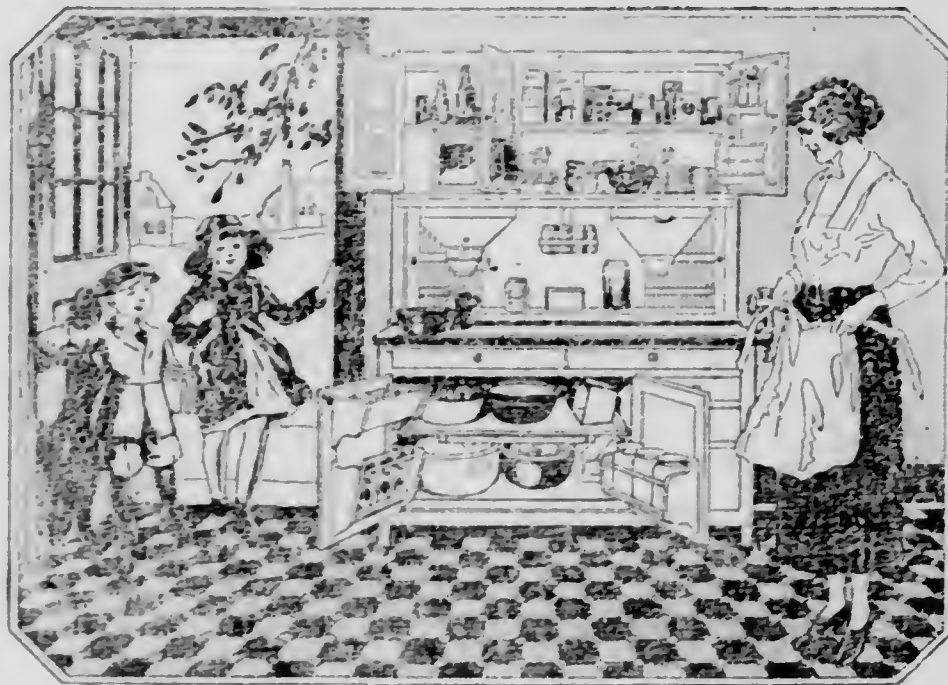

Calomel is dangerous. It may salivate you and make you suffer fearfully from soreness of gums, tenderness of jaws and teeth, swollen tongue and excessive saliva dribbling from the mouth. Don't trust calomel. It is mercury; quicksilver.

If you feel bilious, headachy, constipated and all knocked out, just go to your druggist and get a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tonic for a few cents, which is a harmless vegetable substitute for dangerous calomel. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't start your liver and straighten you up better and quicker than nasty calomel and without making you sick, you just go back and get your money.

If you take calomel today you'll be sick and nauseated tomorrow; besides it may salivate you, while if you take Dodson's Liver Tonic you will wake up feeling great. No salts necessary. Give it to the children because it is perfectly harmless and cannot salivate.

"GOLDEN RULE" BEST FOR ROAD

A popular company has had compiled the following list of instructions to be observed by all motor car operators:

First—Put yourself behind the other man's steering wheel.

Second—Don't laugh at timid passengers. They are your guests. Make them comfortable.

Third—Don't expect children to look out for themselves. The fact that it was the child's "fault" makes death less terrible.

Fourth—When a man in the wrong insists on the right of way let him have it. You can't argue with a fool.

Fifth—Get the hand signal right. It protects you as well as others.

Sixth—When the man behind wants to pass, slow down and drive over. It is safer to have him speeding ahead of you than alongside of you.

Seventh—Don't dash by street cars as they are about to stop.

Eighth—Don't try to pass the car ahead when another car is approaching from the opposite direction.

Ninth—Slow down and keep to the right as you come to the crest of a hill.

Tenth—Don't dispute the crossing with a railroad train. What's the hurry?

Eleventh—Think of the other road users when you have to splash through mud and water.

Twelfth—Remember that the pedestrian at the crossing has a right to cross.

Thirteenth—Don't drive jerkily. It keeps the man behind you worried.

Fourteenth—When your brakes are not working the time to get them fixed is now.

Fifteenth—If you forget the rules of the road you can safely fall back upon the Golden Rule.

Hail Destroys Millions of Dollars of Tobacco

The loss of tobacco by hail in this and other tobacco states within the last five years has run up into millions of dollars with only a small part covered by insurance. Yet, the amount of insurance received by growers who had the foresight thus to protect themselves against such loss, was enormous and should make every grower not only feel the necessity of insuring his tobacco crop against hail storms loss but to do that very thing and do it at once.

What Dr. Halley Says: Dr. Samuel H. Halley, of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association, upon congratulating an insurance company on lowering its rates on tobacco hail insurance, said: "Within the period that I have had hail insurance I have had four severe losses. The money I received exceeded considerably what I paid in, to say nothing of my peace of mind that I was fully protected in case of a storm. I have always advocated carrying hail insurance on tobacco without which every grower takes a chance to lose all. With it he can, in safety, go into the business of producing a crop which requires, as does tobacco, so much labor, time and money."

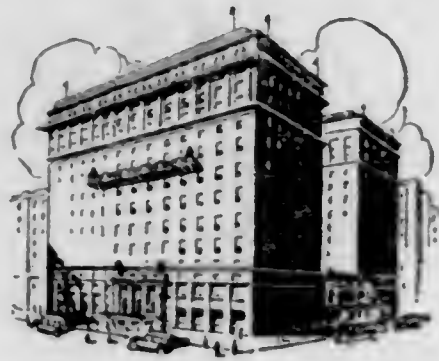

Now that the Burley Growers have gone into an organization to handle their business in a modern economic business-like way, I see no reason why all growers can not take out insurance on the reduced rates the companies are now quoting. Look up the insurance agent in your section now, and let him protect you against the loss of your tobacco. Policies effective July 10th, noon.

HARRIET AND THE PIPER

accepted and which rejected. Roy was far, far down town, all these cost money—lots of money. Nina would want to entertain "the girls." And Roy had at present several serious debts.

This was not a cheerful outlook with which to begin three years of penniless matrimony. Roy, snarling and snuffing on the terrace, wondered suddenly if old Madame Carter, who had always been his champion, would help out.

But Richard seemed to read his thought.

"Nina has appealed to her grandmother," he said, "and I know my mother sympathizes, and would be glad to help you. But her affairs are in my hands. She preferred it so, when I offered her some securities years ago, and it has always been so. Her bank account receives a monthly check; she sends all her household bills to my secretary, Fox. He O. K.'s and pays them. Consequently, she is not able to act in this matter, and I think she is glad of it! I believe she would regret the inevitable estrangement as much as I."

Richard had taken a small slip of paper from his pocket, and was studying it thoughtfully. Roy saw it, and his eyes narrowed.

"Now, Mr. Blondin," Nina's father said, slowly, "I'm a business man. I can't bend about the bush, and call things by pretty names. I want a favor of you, and I'm willing to pay for it. I telephoned you this morning that I wanted to see you on a matter of business. This is my proposition."

He leaned forward, and Roy saw the paper from his pocket, and was studying it thoughtfully. Roy saw it, and his eyes narrowed.

To enter the bank, with Richard Carter's check for so substantial an amount, to deposit it, exchange a careless word with the cashier, to write his check for the overdue rent, with a casual apology, to play bridge again, this evening, with young Bellamy, and this time with back the nervous check of his own, as he knew he would win it.

"Just one moment, Mr. Carter. You say that you and I know what marriage is. How do you reconcile it with your knowledge of Nina, your knowledge of her upbringing, to plan deliberately what would make our marriage—or any marriage—foredoomed to failure from the start? I didn't spoil Nina, I didn't form her tastes. She has thought of herself as an heiress, she has spent money, lived luxuriously. I only ask a fair chance. Make it an allowance, if you like. Keep the matter in the family; don't bludge the world that you disapprove! Many a less promising marriage has turned out a brilliant success. She loves me, I—I am devoted to her. I see tremendous possibilities in her!"

"She loves you as a child does, and because she doesn't know you," Richard said, inflexibly. "But you haven't heard what I propose, Blondin. Hear me out. I give you this now, today, on condition that before tonight you talk to Nina. Represent anything you wish to her. Tell her what you please. But convince her that she must wait for two years—with no letters, no meetings, no engagement—that's all."

"On my part, I promise that nobody in the world, not Mrs. Carter, not anybody, will hear of this for two years from today, at least. Meanwhile, we'll assume Nina. Her grandmother wants to take her to Santa Barbara next fall—Gardner wants both the youngsters on his ranch this summer, or she may go with me to Brazil. She'll have enough to think about. We'll not hurt you with her, you may take my word for it. And I tell you frankly that I shall be deeply grateful. I'm not paying you for giving her up. I'm paying you for two years' delay. Young Hopper will be at the Gardners' this summer—she likes him, and he likes her! Well, that's speculation," Richard dismissed it with a movement of his fine hands. "But we'll distract her!" he promised. "Hopper may buy a ranch out there—that sort of thing might suit Nina down to the ground!"

"Buy it with Nina's money," Roy could not help sneering.

Richard eyed him in surprise.

"When Joe Hopper died he left that boy's mother something in the millions," he said. "There's an immense estate." And then, with a reversion to business: "Come, now, Mr. Blondin. We understand each other. Nina's dining at the Bellamys to-night; you're staying there. Will you see her?"

The check fluttered to the table between them. There was a long silence. Then Blondin ground out his cigarette in a stone saucer, rose, in all the easy beauty of his white summer clothes, his flowing scarf, his dark, romantic locks. He lifted his straw hat, put it on, picked up his stick, and laid it on the table. Then he took the check and read it thoughtfully.

"Thank you!" he said. Yet the shameful thing struck him, an adept now in evading and lying, as surprisingly easy, and as he sauntered away in the June warmth and silence, it was not of Nina, or her father, or even of himself that he was thinking.

He had met the widow of Joe Hopper a few nights ago; a faded little pleasant woman of fifty, pathetically grateful for his casual politeness in her strangeness and shyness. He had chanced, quite idly and accidentally, to make an impression on her. She had promised to come to the studio and look at his rugs.

Roy wondered why she dressed so badly; she needed simple underclothes and flowing lines. He heard himself telling her so.

Richard sat on, on the terrace, thinking, and presently his mother came out and joined him. Wasn't he, the old lady asked elaborately, going to the club? It was almost five o'clock, her son reminded her. Two or three of his business associates were coming to dinner; Hansen was to drive them all into the city later. Now, he just felt lazy.

"No tea today?" he asked, presently. People usually went to the club on Sunday, said his mother. She added, irrelevantly, that Harriet was asleep. Richard said that she had looked tired this morning; sleep was the best thing for her.

But suddenly life became significant and thrilling again. He heard her voice, her laugh. She came swiftly and quietly out to them, sitting at him, setting herself in the chair beside his mother. She wore white, transparent, simple; there were coral beads about her firm young throat. The dew of her deep sleep made her blue eyes wonderful; her cheeks were as pink as a baby's.

"Aren't the June days delicious?" she said, Richard studied her, smilingly, without answering. What would she say next, where would she move her eyes, or lay her white hand, he wondered. When she murmured to his mother in an undertone, he tried to catch the words.

"Did you have a good sleep?" Richard asked. She flashed him an eloquent look.

"Oh—the most delightful of my whole life! Eight hours without sleeping!"

The Hoppers arrived; a handsome mother and two equally handsome daughters. Harriet went to them gracefully; Richard saw that she was accepting good wishes. She took the callers to his mother, and filled their cups herself.

"She certainly is wonderful!" Richard said. He perfectly realized his own suddenly deepening feeling for her, but he dared not analyze it yet. When Mrs. Hoyt hinted at a dinner, he took part in the conversation. "Thursday? Why not, Harriet? We have no engagement for Thursday?"

She flushed brightly, signaling to him that she had already indicated an excuse. They had never dined together away from home. He need not think, said Harriet's anxious manner, that he need carry the appearance of marriage so far.

"But—but aren't Nina and I to be in town Thursday?" she ventured.

"Shopping. You can make that next week!" Richard said. He loved her confusion.

"Then we surely will! Thank you," she said to Mrs. Hoyt.

"Thursday, then, at eight!" the caller said, departing. Richard sauntered with them to their car, and returned to find Harriet half-scandalized, half-laughing.

"But do you want to dine with them?" she asked.

"Why not?" His smile challenged her, and she laughed hardily.

"I suppose there is no reason why not, Mr. Carter!"

"You can wear"—he gestured—"the black and gold thing. They'll all be watching you!"

"Oh," she said, considering earnestly. "I have a much handsomer one than that. Blue and silver. You've not seen it."

"Blue and silver, then." Richard felt a distinct regret when the men he expected appeared. There was but one figure of any interest to him on the shady, flower-scented terrace, and that was a woman's figure in a white gown.

For two or three days he was conscious of a constant interest in her appearances and disappearances, a constant desire to please her. He was conscious of one mastering curiosity: he wanted to know just how Harriet regarded him. It seemed suddenly of supreme importance. He thought of it in his office, and smiled to himself during important business conferences, wondering about it. It seemed incredible to him, now, that his experiences of the past year had been so largely concerned with Harriet. His wife's companion, his daughter's governess, his own capable and dignified housekeeper, the woman he had so hastily married, all seemed a different person, a quite visionary person, with whom just such businesslike arrangements had been possible.

But Harriet was beginning to seem to him a stranger who possessed at once the most mysterious and child-like, the most beautiful and the most baffling personality that he had ever known. He made excuses to go home early, just to catch glimpses of this wife who was not his wife. That he had ever taken a fatherly, advisory tone with this woman was unbelievable; her mere approach made him catch his breath and lose his composure. He had walked into her room—he had patronized her—he had asked her usually to marry him as if she had been fifty, and as plain as she was lovely!

Richard shuddered as he thought of it. He made constant efforts to engage her in personalities, but she evaded him. There was a real thrill for him in the quiet dinner at the Hoyts'. Mrs. Carter, said slow old bewhiskered John Hoyt, was an extremely pretty woman. "My wife"—Richard in answering called her that—"looks particularly well in an evening gown." Indeed she looked exquisite in the blue and silver dress, laughing—still with that adorable mist of strangeness and shyness about her—with her neighbors at the table, and afterward in the drawing room, waving her silver fan slowly while Freda Hoyt, who quite obviously adored her, whispered her long confidences.

Coming home in the limousine they had neighbors with them, old Doctor and Mrs. Carmichael, so he might not have the word alone with her for which he had been longing all evening. But he stopped her in the wide, dim hallway when they reached Crownlands.

"Tired?" he said, at the foot of the stairs.

"Not a bit!" There was an enchanting vitality about her. She had slipped the thin wrap from her shoulders, and she turned to him her lovely, happy face. "Did you want me?"

"I wanted to say something to you," Richard said, feeling awkward as a boy.

"In there?" She nodded, suddenly alert, toward the library.

"Why in there?" he asked, with a little husky laugh. His one impulse was to put his arms about her.

"I thought—bills, perhaps?" Harriet said, innocently. It was the third day of the month; he had often consulted her as to expenses before this.

"No," Richard said, with another unsteady little laugh. "It wasn't bills. I was just wondering—if I had been very stupid," he said, taking one of her hands, and looking up from the fingers that lay in his to the face that now wore an expression a little frightened, despite the smile.

"Never with me!" Harriet said, in a low tone.

"Never so blind," Richard said, "never so matter-of-fact that I hurt your feelings? Nothing of—that sort?"

"Always the kindest friend I ever had!" the girl answered, unsteadily, and with suddenly wet eyes. "The—the most generous!"

He looked at her hand again, looked up at her as if he would speak. But instead, she felt her fingers pressed, and felt her heart thump with a delicious terror.

Bottomless came noiselessly, discreetly, across the hall. Instantly the woman in blue and silver was all the mistress.

No Worms in a Healthy Child

All children troubled with Worms have an unhealthy color, which indicates poor blood, and as a rule, there is more or less stomach disturbance. GROVE'S TASTELESS CHILL TONIC given regularly for two or three weeks will enrich the blood, improve the digestion, and act as a general strength-giving tonic to the whole system. Nature will then throw off or dispel the worms, and the child will be in perfect health. Pleasant to take. 60c per bottle.

CARDUI HELPED REGAIN STRENGTH

Alabama Lady Was Sick For Three Years, Suffering Pain, Nervous and Depressed—Read Her Own Story of Recovery.

Paint Rock, Ala.—Mrs. C. M. Stegall, of near here, recently related the following interesting account of her recovery: "I was in a weakened condition. I was sick three years in bed, suffering a great deal of pain, weak, nervous, depressed. I was so weak, I couldn't walk across the floor; just had to lay and my little ones do the work. I was almost dead. I tried every thing I heard of, and a number of doctors. Still I didn't get any relief. I couldn't eat, and slept poorly. I believe if I hadn't heard of and taken Cardui I would have died. I bought six bottles, after a neighbor told me what it did for her."

"I began to eat and sleep, began to gain my strength and am now well and strong. I haven't had any trouble since. I sure can testify to the good that Cardui did me. I don't think there is a better tonic made and I believe it saved my life."

For over 40 years, thousands of women have used Cardui successfully, in the treatment of many womanly ailments.

If you suffer as these women did, take Cardui. It may help you, too. At all druggists. E 85

REVIVAL MEETING HELD IN OLD TOBACCO BARN

Dr. Ben Cox of Memphis recently concluded the greatest revival ever held in Martin, Tenn. It was for the Central Baptist church, which organized with 100 members about a month ago. The membership now numbers 200. It is the liveliest infant church on record. Thursday 100 were added to the church. The night attendance averaged over 1,000 and the total attendance for the meeting exceeded 12,000 people. An old tobacco barn was the scene of the revival, with cigar boxes for collection plates. Twelve hundred people voted unanimously to have Dr. Cox hold another revival in October in the same old tobacco barn.

FARM BUREAU ENDORSES CO-OPERATIVE MARKETING

Some important steps were taken by the executive committee of the Fulton County Farm Bureau at its last regular meeting held in Fulton, which, if farmers of this county, realizing it as one thing to produce and quite another thing to sell a product, the bureau favors organization for the purpose of improving the selling situation. In this we are not endorsing untried methods, but only those which have been tried and found successful and are now in successful operation in other localities.

The bureau endorses the Co-Operative Live Stock Shippers Association of which a year ago there were more than 5,000 in successful operation. The plan is simple and easily worked. Circular No. 104 of the University of Kentucky gives all the information in detail for its successful operation. It is true some of our farmers have been selling stock in the old way so long that we are a little slow in adopting a new plan, but quite a number have expressed their willingness to go into it, and expect are long to convince the most skeptical that the Shippers Association is not only practical but profitable as well.

After somewhat extended discussion of the tobacco situation the committee desired to go on record as endorsing the Dark Tobacco Growers Association. The chairman appointed a committee to draft resolutions, which are as follows:

Realizing the uneconomical and antiquated system under which our tobacco is being handled, and noting the unusual success resulting from the burley growers' organization, be it

Resolved, That the Fulton County Farm Bureau endorse the effort now being made to organize the dark tobacco growers, and that we pledge our hearty support and co-operation to Judge Robert W. Bingham and those associated with him in the effort to perfect the Dark Tobacco Growers Association among our people.

T. H. McMURRY, Sec.-Treas. F. C. F. B.

O. L. Cunningham, Co. Agent. We see no reason why the dark patch cannot be as successfully organized as the burley growers. It is not only endorsed and offered financial aid by the banks of the state, but by banks of other states also. Any institution that has the banking of our financial institutions on such an extensive scale must be based on sound business principles, and we may reasonably expect its successful operation.

T. H. McMURRY, Secretary-Treasurer F. C. F. B.

HENRY CABOT LODGE, THE UNCONSCIOUS HUMORIST

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge is one of the best unconscious humorists in the country. After asserting that the methods employed by the Democrats in opposing the Infamous of the Fordney-McCumber tariff bill for postponing the arrival of a period of stability, he said:

"Business can never recover fully while uncertainty exists as to the tariff rates."

The Republicans came into control of both branches of Congress following the general elections of 1918. They have been in full control of all branches of the government since March 4, 1921. It was not until a few months ago that they have ever attempted to revise the tariff, and their present efforts are exciting the ridicule, contempt and denunciation of even their own party press.
